

CLINICAL TRIALS OF TEXAS, INC.

Antidepressants. Sexual Desire.

If you feel like you have to choose, it can be hard to know where to turn.

And with few options available to women, it can be difficult to know where to start. We're conducting a confidential research study for women who are actively treating their depression but have become frustrated by a decrease in their sexual desire. This research study will provide women who are eligible to participate with:

- An in-depth consultation with a study doctor to discuss their concerns.
- A private and supportive setting to ask any questions they may have.
- Information about available options, including this research study.

So if you're between the ages of 18 and 50, have not experienced menopause, and are unsure who to talk to about your decreased sexual desire, you may want to consider talking to us.
