

Does your child experience migraine attacks?

A clinical research study is being conducted to test the safety and effectiveness of an investigational study medication in treating symptoms of migraine attacks.

Your child may qualify for the Pediatric Migraine Study if he/she:

- is between 12 and 17 years of age,
- has experienced migraine headaches for more than six months and,
- experiences between one and eight migraine headaches every month.

There are additional study requirements that your child is required to meet to qualify for participation in this clinical research study. Eligible study participants will receive study-related physical examinations and the investigational study medication at no charge. The study doctor will explain the study, including potential benefits and risks of study participation.
